Dear Greg,

I hope this letter finds you doing well, both personally and in your business. I just wanted to thank you again for the opportunity you gave me with Gibbons Erectors. As an owner you surpassed all the other owners I worked for in fairness, honesty, respect and awareness of your employees attributes. You should be proud of yourself. Well enough brown nosing!!!! As you can see from the business cards I enclosed, I have been promoted, if you will, from an Iron Head to an Iron Head Project Manager. Quite a change. I now read Architectural and Structural drawings, do the bill of materials for the shop drawings, order steel and manage the ironworkers in erection. I currently I'm managing a major project for Mesa Steel, about a million dollars in structural and miscellaneous, with a ton of steel stairs. The job is called the Garfield Detention Center in Glenwood Springs, CO. The project also has four stories of pre-cast, which of course reminded me of you. I'm not sure who the pre-caster is or who is erecting it, but who knows maybe one day we will work closely again. My boss, Steve Dennis, also reminds me of you. He's a good man TOO!!! I think he said he knew of you. He used to own Sundance Steel and set a bunch of bridges in and around Denver some year's back. We've been doing a lot of work in Colorado, but if you catch wind of a job needing steel, give a holler. I'll do the same, but most everything is made of clay and straw down here in this third world country!! Please say hi to all the boys, I hope they still work for you. They'd be stupid not to!! Hope to hear from you sometime.

Sincerely,

Paulie Bach
Project Manager
